Georgia Southern University showed its appreciation to the 3rd Infantry Division (Mechanized) at Soldier Appreciation Day prior to its football game against Chattanooga Saturday at Paulson Field in Statesboro.

More than 1,000 soldiers were hosted by the university.

After a performance by the division's band that included "The Dog-Face Soldier" and "The Army Song," gifts were exchanged by Maj. Gen. William G. Webster Jr., 3rd Inf. Div., Fort Stewart and Hunter Army Airfield commanding general, and Dr. Bruce Grube, president, Georgia Southern.

Webster presented Georgia Southern with a copy of a print drawn by Maj. Kevin R. McKay to honor the division's service in Operation Iraqi Freedom.

Grube gave the division a plaque to honor the division's recent accomplishments. The plaque read "In grateful appreciation for duty, sacrifice and loyalty to our country."

Webster said he was "privileged" to represent the division's soldiers.

"It is a real pleasure to stand with the great men and women of this division today," Webster said.

Youth punt, pass, kick at Stewart NFL competition

More than 50 children from the Fort Stewart community turned out for the National Football League Punt, Pass and Kick competition Sept. 24 at the Youth Services Football Field.

Boys and girls age eight to 15 competed in four different age groups to see who could move the football the farthest with a punt, pass and kick.

Every participant received a certificate and the first, second and third place finishers in each age group won ribbons, said Jerome Washington, sports director, Youth Services.

The eight winners will compete in a sectional competition here Oct. 11 for an opportunity to compete at an Atlanta Falcons football game.

"(The NFL Punt, Pass and Kick) is one of the largest programs for kids in the United States," he said. "It's another way for us to give the kids something to do."

Each child had one chance to punt, pass and kick a football as far and straight as he could, Washington said.

Each foot the ball went was a point, and points were deducted for how far away the ball landed from a straight line.

Among the boys, Derrick Brooks, Jr., won in the eight and nine-year-old division, Zachery Hawk won the 10- and 11-year old division, and Paul Hawk won the 12- and 13-year-old division.

T'era Alston won the girls' eight- and nine-year-old division, Ashlei McGown won the 10- and 11-year-old division, LaQuananisha Adams won the 12- and 13-year old division, and Michela Washington won the 14- and 15-year-old division.

The event was a good outlet for the children, said Terrence Alston, who had two children competing.

Schumacher claims second win in Memphis

Army News Service

Tony Schumacher races down the track in Memphis. His U.S. Army Top Fuel drag team has won its last two races.

Army News Service

Special to The Frontline

MEMPHIS, Tenn. — The U.S. Army Racing Team had a Cinderella ending to the rain-delayed O'Reilly Mid-South Nationals at Memphis Motorsports Park Sept. 22.

Tony "The Sarge" Schumacher, who endured a crash in qualifying Sept. 19, came back to secure the Top Fuel crown with a win over Larry Dixon. It was his second straight victory.

Schumacher, who has been nursing a sore knee since his crash, piloted his U.S. Army Top Fuel dragster to wins over David Grubnic, Clay Millican and Doug Kalitta, before disposing of Dixon with a stellar 4.581-second pass at 317.79 mph.

"This was just a superb job by the Army team," Schumacher said. "To be able to put aside the crash Friday night and go out and win the race is really something. This team stayed focused on the job that had to be done."

"We lost a great race car Friday night, but I guess we pulled out another great race car. Alan Johnson (crew chief) is truly a master. I'm certainly glad he's in our corner."

After recording his third victory of the season, the 1999 Top Fuel world champion moved to within a point of third-place Darrell Russell with five races remaining in the 2003 season.

"We want that third-place spot, but we want to win as many races as we can the rest of the way," Schumacher said. "We're trying to set the table for next year."

"The people of Statesboro have been great supporters."

Two of the division's soldiers were chosen to be honorary captains for the Eagles. Capt. Kareem Montague, A Battery, 1st Battalion, 41st Field Artillery Regiment commander, and Capt. Lyn W. Ray, commander, Headquarters and Headquarters Detachment, Engineer Brigade, went out for the pre-game coin toss, which was done with a division coin.

The crowd gave the soldiers a standing ovation after their presence was acknowledged.

"It was really nice to see that," said Spc. Adam Baker, command driver, HHD, Eng. Bde. "There has been a lot of support from everybody (back home). It felt good seeing all it."

The 16th-ranked Eagles, who came into the game with a 1-2 record, rounded out the day with a 34-3 win in their Southern Conference opener. Quarterback Trey Hunter completed four of seven passes for 147 yards and two touchdowns and ran in for an additional score against an overmatched Chattanooga defense.

Sports USA offers NFL pick slips

Nancy Gould
DCAS Marketing

Sports USA is getting ready to tackle the 2003 football season with some fun competition, according to Yvette Shepard, the facility manager.

The high-energy sports bar is keying in on the competition and tradition of professional football with installation and inter-installation competitions. Soldiers and other community members can challenge each other—along with participants at other installations—to select winners of biweekly games until the football season ends in late December.

“NFL Pick Slips” are available at Sports USA and will be in the Leisure Guide in November. Slips must be dropped into the Sports USA entry box by 11 p.m., every Wednesday prior to the upcoming game scheduled. Only one slip per person is allowed for each biweekly game.

“Winners will get special prizes,” Shepard said, adding that the winning installation also gets the prestigious “Big Green Pick” trophy and another lucky person wins a trip for two to the NFL Pro Bowl in Hawaii in February 2004.

Sports USA’s “home away from home” atmosphere gives patrons a relaxed place to unwind and have fun while watching the game on one of several large screen televisions or one of 17 smaller ones. And those who want variety can play pool on one of six pool tables, or video games on one of seven game machines.

For more information about the NFL football or other activities at Sports USA, call Shepard at 912-767-8715 after 4 p.m.

“It keeps them from getting into things (parents) would rather they not get into,” he said. “They get out here and bond with each other and have a lot of fun.”

Ryan Smith, who was competing in the 10- and 11-year-old division, said he was glad to participate in the competition. “It’s good practice,” he said.

Youth Services offers a wide selection of sports for Fort Stewart’s children to participate in, Washington said.

“It’s an outstanding program for the kids,” he said. “It’s important because with the parents going on field problems and overseas, it’s our job to make sure the kids are active and staying busy.”

Charleston, S.C. — Amy Carnell scored twice for the Spartans, as UNC Greensboro (UNCG) went on to beat the Citadel 7-0 in Southern Conference action Sept. 24 at the UNCG Soccer Stadium.

“We did not seem to come to play tonight,” stated Citadel head coach Megan Hjerling. “There were good performances by Kristine Solis and Louise Kjellquist. We need learn from this and move on.”

UNCG sophomore Amy Carnell scored her first and the team’s first goal of the match at 16:36 off an assist from Takel Logadottir. Freshman Dianna Gardner found the back of the net for the Spartans 15 minutes later as she deflected a ball cleared from Bulldog goalie sophomore Martha Skinner.

UNCG’s freshman Carolyn Lindsay knocked one in just before the half to make the score 3-0.

Spartan sophomore Cara Hammond began the second-half with a goal at the 46 mark.

Freshman Tiffany Hallenbeck tallied the fifth goal for UNCG, while Carnell registered her second goal of the game at 78:32.

UNCG sophomore Devan Beachum finished the game with a goal at 81:26 to seal the victory for UNCG.
